RESEARCHING YOUR CHARACTER

Final Draft Due: 00/00/00, submitted to Turnitin.com by start of class

Total Possible Points: 50

Assignment Rationale: You've just been assigned your role in the game! Your first step will be to read your role sheet. The role sheet outlines and offers you information on your character. For this first assignment, you'll begin researching to find out as much as you can about your character and their history or backstory. If your character is fictional, you'll need to create a backstory, building off of the information on your role sheet. While you may find information about your character, you'll also find there might be some gaps or holes in the information. This assignment asks that you fill in those holes.

Questions to consider:
What do you know about your character? Do they have a history? What are their beliefs or values? Why do they believe what they do? What motivates them? What are their strengths and weaknesses?

Consider the questions above for getting started and don't be afraid to be creative when filling in the gaps of your character.

Assignment Guidelines:
Your paper should be 500 to 750 words. If you draw from outside sources, please cite them according to MLA guidelines. This assignment will be evaluated using the 111 rubric, focusing on Content, Organization, Style, and Conventions.

As always, please visit me during office hours for help or questions.